

ABSTRACT

A universal addressing method and system allow messages to be sent using any protocol or service by routing the message to a recipient using a universal address. Routing information associated with the universal address for each message service may be easily
5 configured and stored. The routing information also may be quickly and easily modified to change the message delivery location. The system may include a message service provider and a universal address service provider supervised by a universal address authority.